(Private.)

Boston, June 12, 1846.

My dear McKim:

You are requested to give the accompanying proceedings an insertion in the next Freeman. Perhaps something may be done to forward the mission, in your section of the country. I do not wish to go to England at the expense of two or three individuals, but shall feel much more gratified if the sum that will be needed should be made up by a general co-operation of the friends, so as to burden nobody. I trust that the mission will not only pay for itself, in a pecuniary sense, but in the end be the means of securing valuable and permanent pecuniary aid to the cause, through the Fair, &c.

The time has been when a mission of this kind would have excited a lively sensation among our colored friends in New-York and Philadelphia, and elicited from them some assistance; but our cause seems to have transcended them as a body, both as it respects the Church and State — religion and politics. How would my old friend Joseph Cassey feel about the mission?

Yours, on both sides of the Atlantic,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.
